

Hello friend!

I am writing with some bittersweet, but very exciting news to share.

When I first joined the New Harvest team in the spring of 2014, I knew I was getting to be a part of something special. But just how formative and pivotal of an experience it would be exceeded even my wildest hopes. The past four and a half years have been an incredibly rewarding professional experience for me: together we have grown our little DIY operation into an eminent powerhouse making cellular agriculture a reality on the global stage.

I have enjoyed this work immensely, but the time has come for me to leave the nest.

The New Harvest chapter of my career will come to a close on August 31st, but I will remain an active member of the cellular agriculture community and a friend to Isha, Kate, and each of our Research Fellows going forward.

Thank you all for the many learnings, laughs, and lifelong memories - and on to the next!

All the best,
